WHY PEOPLE SAY THANK YOU

An old man and a boy were walking along a forest path. It was a hot day, and they both felt thirsty. After a few minutes the travelers came to a softly murmuring stream full of fresh, cool water. They knelt down and drank to their fill. Thank you stream, said the old man. The boy laughed. What did you say "thank you" to the stream for? He asked his grandfather. It's not alive. It can't hear you. It doesn't understand when you say "thank you" to it. That's true, the grandfather agreed. And if a wolf was taking a drink, it wouldn't say "thank you", either. But we're not wolves, we're people. Do you know why people say "thank you"? Think, now, whom are the words really for? The boy fell into thought. He had plenty of time, for they still had a long way to go.

Moral: Practice attitude of gratitude.
